Starting university is a whirlwind of experiences, from tackling the monumental reading list, to making new friends at the union bar and taking advantage of your newfound freedom. With the world at their feet, many students will be planning their first parent-free trips abroad, but student travel insurance provider Wander warns them to ensure they take out adequate cover. Wander Student Insurance, from the leading global travel insurance solutions company Mondial Assistance, offers students worldwide travel protection, helping them expand their horizons.

“Part of striking out on your own is learning to protect yourself should the worst happen, but many students will jet off on holiday without insurance,” explains Claire McKinnon of Wander. “A lack of experience combined with a yearning for adventure means many students may put themselves at risk of an accident or an emergency while travelling. We have already launched our International Student Insurance product to provide international students studying in the UK with access to affordable cover, ensuring they remember their studies and trip for all the right reasons.”

Mondial Assistance is expanding its Wander range of Student Insurance products to provide cover to UK students wherever they travel. Now UK students can choose from single trip or annual cover, Family and Backpacker. Optional extras include winter sports cover for injury and ski equipment, extreme sports and golf cover for loss of green fees and equipment.

International medical assistance from Wander offers access to 400,000 service providers who deliver qualified medical advice and professional attention, together with full repatriation facilities. With support from Mondial Assistance’s global network of 180 medical and technical correspondents and 37, 24 hour assistance centres, Wander Student Insurance aims to provide the highest level of emergency medical assistance.

In addition to worldwide emergency medical and associated expenses, the cover includes loss of passport and delayed luggage, as well as personal accident and legal expenses whilst on educational trips. The student cover website www.wandertravelinsurance.co.uk/ukstudent/ instantly provides care at the touch of a button.

McKinnon concludes, "The study hard, play hard lifestyle of UK students can mean that they inadvertently put themselves at risk on trips abroad. By investing in good travel insurance, students can enjoy a safe trip without having to curb their enthusiasm. Wander ensures that students gain worldwide cover for holidays as well as trips made as part of their academic experience, allowing them to relax and enjoy everything university life has to offer."
